Inspiring a lifelong love of reading
Cheeky Monkey
Zehra Hicks
Hodder
A little red monkey wants to play, but nobody else wants to! Monkey manages to get paint on Zebra’s tail, steal Giraffe’s lunch and barge ahead of the meerkats on the slide – not to mention waking Lion up from his nap. Oh dear! It looks like Monkey has to say those two little words: I’m sorry. Fortunately, saying sorry has a brilliant effect and Monkey soon finds that everyone wants to play.

Another super picture book from Zehra Hicks that has lovely illustrations and blocky text with minimal words, and is perfect for toddlers learning how to be a good playmate.

I Like Trains
Daisy Hirst
Walker Books
Playing with a train set, driving a cardboard-box train or reading about trains – little dog loves them all. But nothing beats riding a real train – buying the tickets, choosing a seat, watching from the window – before eventually arriving at Granny’s. And, luckily, she’s a big train fan too!

This beautifully illustrated, simple picture book takes youngsters through every stage of a train journey from going through a dark tunnel to feeling the whoosh of another passing train. With plenty to recognise and talk about on every page, this is an essential shared reading experience for train-lovers and grannies everywhere.

Where’s Baby Elephant?
Ali Khodai
Tiny Owl
Embark on a wonderous journey through this innovative lift-the-flap picture book to discover the whereabouts of baby elephant. Is she with the orangutans, the crocodile and her hatchlings, or perhaps the lion and his cubs? With 12 animal families concealed within four pages, the simple yet clever format enables seamless transformations from one species to the next. Featuring vibrant illustrations and robust cardboard pages, this stunning book is an inventive way to introduce children to a range of animals.
Catch That Chicken!
Atinuke, illustrated by Angela Brooksbank
Walker Books
Lami is the best chicken-catcher in the whole village. But on the day she chases a chicken up into the baobab tree, Lami is going too too fast. She falls and hurts her ankle so badly that it puffs up like the neck of an angry lizard. How is Lami going to catch chickens now?
Perhaps what she needs is quick thinking rather than quick feet...

This joyful picture book fizzes with the energy, colour, rhythms and bustle of Nigerian village life, accompanied by alliterative text, repeated phrases and vibrant illustrations that are wonderfully expressive and packed with intricate detail.

I Can Learn My First Colours: Animal World
Lauren Crisp, illustrated by Thomas Elliot
Little Tiger
What colour is a flamingo? Why is a giraffe so tall? What does an elephant do with its trunk? The answers are in the bold illustrations and snappy rhymes in this sturdy, interactive board book.

Ten familiar animals from around the world each have a page, a colour and a short rhyme to introduce themselves.
By turning a set of brightly painted, spinning, wooden discs, youngsters can match a further ten animals by colour – or just enjoy the pictures and the process of spinning them round.

An exciting, hands-on look at colours suitable for the pre-school age range.

Supertato: Super Squad
Sue Hendra & Paul Linnet
Simon & Schuster
Supertato is on a mission to teach Evil Pea a lesson and rallies the Super Squad to help. Carrot, Cucumber, Broccoli and Pineapple leap into action, working as a team to gather the objects they need for the task.

This action-packed adventure is full of daft humour and reminds readers of the importance of kindness and generosity. Bold, vibrant illustrations provide plenty of visual interest, and may even encourage children to eat their vegetables! Look out for other exciting adventures in the series featuring this fun crew of super-foods.
Time for Bed, Panda
Jo Lodge
Campbell Books
A panda is getting ready for bed: having a bath, brushing her teeth and reading a story before snuggling down under the covers. On each opposite page, Panda asks readers if they can repeat three relevant words along with her: bath, bubbles and towel on one page, and bed, moon and milk on another. Babies and toddlers can also enjoy sticking their fingers through circular holes in the book and turning the pages.

A delightfully cuddly and sweet board book for little ones, this also has enduring appeal as babies become toddlers and start learning words.

Where’s Lenny?
Ken Wilson-Max
Alanna Max
Lenny and Daddy have great fun playing hide-and-seek in this delightful picture book. Daddy searches everywhere for Lenny – in the cupboard, by the window, in the bathroom – but he is nowhere to be found.

The repetition of the phrase ‘Where’s Lenny?’ on each page will encourage young children to join in with the words, and they will love exploring the vibrant illustrations to find Lenny’s hiding places, helping them to develop their observation skills. This charming tale, which features a mixed-race family, is ideal to share with toddlers.

Scruff
Alice Bowsher
Cicada Books
A rather scruffy man goes to the dog pound and finds a dog which is just as scruffy as him. Yet Scruff the dog just wants to be pampered!

After a wash and brush up, man and dog are feeling much smarter. When Scruff sees a sign for a dog show, his desire to be the most beautiful dog intensifies. Will Scruff win a prize – and what for?

Playing with the idea that people look like their dogs, this super fun, bold and scribbly book about dogs and their owners is a lovely one for toddlers and preschoolers.
The Touch Book: A Sensory Book to Explore
Nicola Edwards, illustrated by Thomas Elliot
Little Tiger
There are so many textures to explore in this book: fluffy, crinkly, bumpy, sticky, rough, spongy... On each double-page spread, one texture is explored – a bumpy texture panel on an orange, or sticky cut-through holes on a bowl of honey. Other words with similar meanings are given at the top of the page along with a small range of pictures showing other examples.

This larger than average board book has a large, bold font so that children can start to recognise words. It’s a little more comprehensive than a baby board book so suited to slightly older toddlers too.

The Whales on the Bus
Katrina Charman, illustrated by Nick Sharratt
Bloomsbury
Most of us might know the nursery rhyme ‘The Wheels on the Bus’, but what if there were two whales jammed into a double decker, being driven around town by a goldfish? Or a tiger in a glider? Or sheep in a jeep? This charming picture book has reimagined the classic nursery rhyme with brilliant results.

The bold visual style and big text means that the book is accessible both for adults reading and children looking at the pages. There are also lots of new words to learn for little ones who are often very interested in both animals and vehicles.

Veg Patch Party
AClare Foges, illustrated by Al Murphy
Faber & Faber
When all the animals on the farm have gone to bed and the moon is shining high in the sky, the vegetables are getting ready to party! It’s time for a raucous veggie music festival featuring bands like the Red Hot Chillis, the superstar Pumpkin, and DJ Brussel Sprout.

This is a brilliantly bright and colourful rhyming picture book for little ones with veg-based puns and an irresistible refrain perfect for reading aloud together. There’s a gorgeous holographic foil double-page spread in the middle and lots of hilariously expressive veggie characters. You’ll be asked to read this one again and again.

Love Makes a Family
Sophie Beer
Caterpillar Books
This striking rainbow-coloured board book explores how love manifests itself in families of all shapes, sizes and ethnicities. From an early morning serenade to stories at bedtime, it’s not just the hugs and kisses that shine through.

Vibrant illustrations packed with fascinating detail remind us that whether a family has two mums, two dads, one of each or a single parent, it’s the love that is shown and shared that makes a family.

Grown-ups who share this book will find it hard not to chuckle as they recognise themselves in the long-suffering but joyful love-givers in its pages.
Mirror Baby: Peekaboo!
Campbell Books
Peekaboo! Can you see a smiling baby? What about that baby hiding under a blanket?

Babies adore seeing photos of other babies and themselves, so here’s a book that shows your baby five other babies they can play peekaboo with, as well as a mirror they can see their own face in.

Each baby is doing something slightly different – looking surprised, hiding, smiling and waving – and a simple rhyming text means that babies can listen to words and rhythms too.

Let’s Go! On A Digger
Rosalyn Albert, illustrated by Natalia Moore
New Frontier Publishing
A little girl drives her digger around on a building site. Sitting inside the cab, the little girl enjoys moving the joystick and pushes the drive rods forward to make the tank-like treads on the digger’s wheels move forward.

Let’s Go! On A Digger is a rhyming board book for toddlers that tells a little story. In this case, a girl experiencing the dream of many toddlers – getting to drive a big yellow digger! Parents of little ones obsessed with pointing out tractors, diggers and other vehicles will be delighted to share this board book with their toddlers.

Animal ABC
Nikolas Ilic
Happy Yak
A is for Ape, B is for Bear, C is for Crocodile... Learn the alphabet with some amazing animals and find out some fun facts along the way, like that Yaks use their long horns to shovel through snow to find food, or that a Gecko can’t blink and cleans its eyes by licking them!

A delightful, colourful board book, perfect as a starting point for animal-loving toddlers learning their alphabet.

Meekoo and the Little Nursery
Camilla Reid, illustrated by Nicola Slater
Nosy Crow
This delightful, interactive board book explores the highs and lows of Meekoo the bear’s busy day at nursery. Children will love to press the sound buttons on each page, which produce entertaining noises relating to the story, including a flushing toilet, a bouncy ball and lots of kisses for Big Bear at hometime. Ideal for those who attend, or are about to start, nursery, this reassuring tale is full of familiar experiences for toddlers. The vibrant illustrations are charming, and the sturdy cardboard pages with rounded corners are easy for small hands to grasp.
Baby Touch: Food

Illustrated by Lemon Ribbon Studio

Ladybird

What does Baby like for breakfast? Toast, porridge or an egg is nice but squishy pancakes are the best!

How about a mid-morning snack? It could be bumpy carrot sticks or maybe smooth, shiny grapes.

Whether it’s soft ice-cream, messy pasta or bobbly rice cakes, food to babies is all about texture and fun. And this bright, appealing, touch-and-feel board book lets them explore without making a mess!

With a different meal on each double-page spread, there’s plenty of opportunity for youngsters to point to and identify a range of familiar foods, providing scope for lots of interaction and learning.

The Very Hungry Caterpillar's Hide-and-Seek

Eric Carle

Puffin

Toddlers and pre-schoolers can enjoy classic ‘Hungry Caterpillar-style’ illustrations and rhyming text on a fascinating trip into the forest to search for some of the creatures who live there.

The die-cut trails of bees, frogs, mice, fox cubs and the famous caterpillar himself will be irresistible to little fingers. And who will they find hiding behind each of the sturdy flaps?

This exciting lift-the-flap board book is a great way for youngsters to explore the different habitats within a forest, and multiple cut-outs on every page add an extra dimension making the pictures tactile as well as colourful.

NO! Said Rabbit

Marjoke Henrichs

Scallywag Press

When Rabbit wakes up in the morning, Mum calls out that it’s time to get dressed. NO! says Rabbit – but then he remembers that he really loves his trousers with the big pockets.

Playing outside, Rabbit doesn’t want to come in for a bath, a snack or a drink. Finally, after his bath, mum suggests a cuddle – the only thing that Rabbit responds to straight away with a definite yes.

Ideal for toddlers and pre-schoolers, Marjoke Henrichs’s picture book will be very familiar to parents of little ones who have just discovered ‘no’ and like to use it at every opportunity.
Arlo The Lion Who Couldn’t Sleep
Catherine Rayner
Macmillan
Poor Arlo the lion is very tired but just can’t get to sleep. Desperate for some rest, Arlo meets Owl who sings him to sleep with a special, relaxing song. Arlo wakes feeling refreshed and ready to take on the day, but then Arlo wakes Owl from her sleep. Fortunately, Arlo now knows a new song that will help...

Arlo is a cuddly, relatable lion we’d all like to snuggle next to, and Owl’s song – repeated twice in the book for maximum bedtime lulling effect – guides children through a gentle relaxation process of stretching and wriggling before settling down to dream.

Meet the Oceans
Caryl Hart, illustrated by Bethan Woollvin
Bloomsbury
Discover the undersea caves of the Atlantic Ocean, visit the busy shipping lanes of the South China Sea and marvel at the spectacular Great Barrier Reef in the Coral Sea, which can be seen from space. From friendly beluga whales and giant jellyfish to tropical islands and enormous icebergs, there is so much to see on this exciting underwater adventure.

Young children will love diving into this vibrant picture book and embarking on a captivating exploration of the world’s oceans. Each double-page spread focuses on a different body of water and highlights some of the creatures and plants that lie beneath the waves.

Just One of Those Days
Jill Murphy
Macmillan
Everyone in the Bear household wakes up late one morning. When Baby Bear gets to Nursery, someone plays with his favourite dinosaur AND drinks out of his favourite red cup. Meanwhile, Mrs Bear has sat on her glasses and fallen asleep at her desk, and Mr Bear has spilled coffee all over some papers.

Completely relatable for families with little ones, there’s a comforting feel to Jill Murphy’s picture books that remind us that, even if we’ve had a tough day, there’s always something simple like a cup of tea, a pizza or a cuddle, which will make it all right.
Pirate Stew
Neil Gaiman, illustrated by Chris Riddell
Bloomsbury
Mum and Dad are going out for the evening and have booked a babysitter for the children. Yet, when the babysitter arrives, he turns out to be a huge, bearded pirate.

As soon as Mum and Dad have left, a horde of other pirates arrive and decide to make something called Pirate Stew for the children’s dinner. However, the children know if they eat the pirate stew, it will turn them into pirates. But will Mum and Dad be as wise?

Featuring a flying pirate ship, a delicious doughnut shop and a rollicking rhyme, Pirate Stew is a great book for storytime.

When I Say Boo, You Say Hoo
John Kane
Templar Books
John Kane’s brilliantly silly, clever book sets up a series of call-and-response rules with young readers to create a hilarious performative reading.

If you see the colour blue, you must shout out Stinky Poo! If you see a tree, shout ME! Once the rules have been set, the book starts to put funnier and funnier questions and answers together until the kids are shouting about a farting ghost and no one knows exactly who has done a poo.

A perfect book for Key Stage 1 kids for a hilarious read at the end of the day, or just as perfect at home.

What Happened to You?
James Catchpole, illustrated by Karen George
Faber & Faber
Joe is engrossed in his game of pirates when some new children arrive in the playground. Noticing that he only has one leg, the inevitable questions begin. Joe has to fend off a barrage of interrogations before the kids all finally get on with the important job of avoiding being eaten by sharks.

This clever, beautiful book reminds us that, for Joe, it’s much more fun to play pirates than have to answer questions about his disability all the time. At the end of the book, the author (who has lived experience as an amputee) adds advice for adults on handling such questions.
I Really, Really Need a Wee!
Karl Newson, illustrated by Duncan Beedie

Little Tiger
Bush Baby REALLY needs a wee. She didn’t need one when she was at home, but now she’s desperate! Trying to distract herself, she thinks about twigs and acorns, and then a waterfall – oh dear! That doesn’t help at all.

Finally, she finds a toilet, but there’s a huge queue! It’s enough to make a Bush Baby squirm with frustration… Will Bush Baby make it in time?

A funny and useful book for little ones that might be toilet training – although we all sometimes really, really need a wee.

Spaghetti Hunters
Morag Hood

Two Hoots
Duck is looking for his spaghetti, but he can’t find it anywhere. Fortunately, Tiny Horse, self-proclaimed spaghetti hunter, has all the kit to help them find the elusive pasta.

Yet when Tiny Horse presents her findings, Duck isn’t convinced. Is spaghetti supposed to hiss? And what’s that ball of wool doing there?

Morag Hood’s slightly surreal books with minimal text and lots of laughs are perfect for two to four-year-olds. In reading, we also learn a little about how spaghetti is made, teaching very young children about the origin of their food.

Barbara Throws a Wobbler
Nadia Shireen

Jonathan Cape
Barbara is not having a great day, and when she drops her ice-cream, a full-blown WOBBLER erupts. ARGHHH!

The Wobbler – a red, jelly-like creature – threatens to take over Barbara altogether, until she talks to it and realises she’s in control after all. With a little bit of effort, can Barbara make the Wobbler disappear?

As ever, Shireen’s humour and empathy with little ones shines through, creating a book that understands how frustrating life can be when you’re small, but also knows that tantrums are just a part of life and – maybe – something that we can all laugh about afterwards.
Dog Gone
Rob Biddulph
HarperCollins
Edward Pugglesworth the pug is enjoying his walk in the park with his owner Dave when they happen upon a terrifying troll in the woods. And when Edward loses Dave in the woods and ends up near a scary shed, he thinks he’s done for – until the troll turns out to be not so very terrifying after all.

Rob Biddulph’s rhyming story has a happy ending with a message about kindness and thinking the best of people. His signature bright style and background detail means there’s lots to look at too, and plenty of clues about who the troll might really be.

The Hospital Dog
Julia Donaldson, illustrated by Sara Ogilvie
Macmillan
Dot the dalmatian is a very special dog indeed. Dot accompanies her owner Rose to the hospital to soothe and entertain the children, babies, parents, doctors and nurses who are there. She even learns how to sign hello to Joe, a boy who is deaf.

Yet when Dot has to go the vet with a broken leg, she learns just how boring and frustrating getting better can be – and how important her visits are!

This is a truly wonderful book. The bright illustrations are full of life, warmth, expression and tiny details that make this a story to come back to again and again.

Coming to England
Floella Benjamin, illustrated by Diane Ewen
Macmillan
This picture book autobiography explores the early life of Floella Benjamin, celebrated writer, actress and television presenter. It begins in her childhood home of Trinidad, where she lives with her parents and five siblings, and charts her move to England in 1960 as part of the Windrush generation.

Simple text and colourful illustrations bring Floella’s experiences to life for a young audience, from her fifteen-day voyage on an enormous ship, to eventually meeting the Queen. A wonderful book which explores an important part of British history.

Ned and the Great Garden Hamster Race
Kim Hillyard
Ladybird
Ned’s been training hard and there’s only one thing on his mind today: the Big Garden Hamster Race. As he pulls ahead of the pack, Ned’s so focussed on winning that he won’t spare a second to reassure a lost little slug or rescue a stranded rabbit. But the help he gets from an unlikely source after a nasty tumble makes him reconsider his priorities.

With hamster’s-eye-view illustrations, speech bubbles, and zingy energy complement a heart-warming and very funny narrative, this delightful tale shows the value of kindness for those who give it as well as those who receive it.
Octopus Shocktopus!
Peter Bently, illustrated by Steven Lenton
Nosy Crow

One day, a huge pink octopus appears on the roof of Mrs Antrobus’s house. It’s an enthusiastic footballer, as well as being a brilliant slide and rollercoaster. In fact, the octopus is also brilliant at clearing snow from driveways with its giant tentacles and finding toys stuck in trees. When the octopus disappears one day everyone is sad – until it returns with an excellent surprise!

This wonderfully crafted rhyming story is brilliant to read aloud, with a bouncy rhythm and hilarious vocabulary which will delight small listeners. It’s a cosy and wholesome illustrations are a delight.

I Am Every Good Thing
Derrick Barnes, illustrated by Gordon C. James
Farshore

The child depicted in this gorgeous book is a ball of energy; a gentleman and a scholar; a hilarious friend; and a good brother. Yet sometimes he is afraid of the world around him. Fortunately, the adults in his life will always be there to support him, as will all of those that are good of heart in the wider world.

A stunning visual poem dedicated to supporting and loving black boys, I Am Every Good Thing features incredible illustration from Gordon C. James which really brings a tear to the eye on some particularly emotive spreads.

The Pirate Mums
Jodie Lancet-Grant, illustrated by Lydia Corry
Oxford University Press

Billy’s family isn’t like other families, because his two mums are PIRATES! So when they volunteer to help on a class trip to the seaside, Billy is super embarrassed. Yet when lightning hits their ship, Billy’s mums come to the rescue with their pirate know-how.

This brilliantly fun story about a day out gone awry – and two seriously committed pirate mums – is a lovely book to read aloud, with a heart-warming message. It’s a cosy and silly read, perfect for bedtime or any other time of the day when a story is needed.
It’s Only Stanley
Jon Agee
Scallywag Press
The Wimbledon family are fast asleep one night when they’re awakened by a strange noise. Their dog, Stanley, is howling at the moon. Stanley keeps waking everyone up with a series of bizarre activities – he makes catfish stew in the basement, he fixes the TV and the oil tank.

When the Wimbledons find themselves transported to the moon in their pyjamas, it suddenly becomes clear why Stanley was howling in the first place...

Jon Agee’s brilliantly inventive and funny rhyming picture book is a perfect repeat read. The rhymes are unexpected and original, and children will be calling out the final MOON! along with the grown-ups.

Can Bears Ski?
Raymond Antrobus, illustrated by Polly Dunbar
Walker Books
Little Bear wakes up, gets dressed and has his breakfast. Then Dad walks him to school. All morning, he keeps thinking that people are asking him ‘Can bears ski?’ Why would they keep asking that?

After school, Dad picks Little Bear up and they go and see an audiologist who fits Little Bear with some hearing aids. Suddenly the world is very loud indeed! And when Dad reads a bedtime story, Little Bear can finally appreciate what he was missing before.

A brilliant depiction of being hearing impaired alongside a lovely story told in a relatable child voice.

The Runaway Pea Washed Away
Kjartan Poskitt, illustrated by Alex Willmore
Simon & Schuster
Hidden under a pile of washing-up bubbles, an adventurous pea finds himself zooming down the plug and along the pipes towards the drain.

You can’t help but love the little pea’s unwavering optimism as he hurtles from peril to peril – he even has a wonderful time in the dark and smelly sewers! But will our tiny hero find his way back home in one pea-ce?

Kjartan Poskitt and Alex Willmore have created a loveable and hilarious hero in The Runaway Pea, with fun-to-read bouncy rhymes that are perfect for reading aloud, hilarious new characters, and the sheer joy of our larger-than-life, pea-sized protagonist. Great fun.
Space Detectives
Mark Powers, illustrated by Dapo Adeola
Bloomsbury

When Starville is dramatically thrown out of orbit onto a collision course with the moon, do Connor and Ethan have what it takes to save everyone from certain death?

If the thought of meeting a Snargletoothed Grizloid or a swarm of Neptunian Bat-Rats doesn't worry you, or if you like the sound of a zero-gravity bouncy castle, a hover scooter, snorgleberry drizzle cake or swamp-lizard drumsticks, then this is a book you'll definitely enjoy.

Packed with witty and dynamic black-and-white illustrations and a very human underlying message, this is an ideal chapter book for newly independent readers.

Cally and Jimmy: Twins in Trouble
Zoe Antoniades, illustrated by Katie Kear
Andersen Press

Cally and Jimmy are twins but they couldn't be more different. Cally sits on the ‘top table’ in class and enjoys school. Jimmy has problems sitting still and often gets into trouble.

However, Cally and Jimmy agree that they don’t like the attention Mum is getting from Grant, the fix-it man, so they hatch a plan to keep them apart. They also make an alarming batch of ‘revenge’ brownies and have the best separate/together birthday party too.

This collection of four short stories is funny, touching, enlightening and ideal for newly confident readers. The black-and-white illustrations on every page capture the fun and chaos of life in a complex family.

Squishy McFluff: On with the Show!
Pip Jones, illustrated by Ella Okstad
Faber & Faber

Ava and her best friend Squishy McFluff, the invisible cat, are thrilled to hear that Bing’s Big Top Circus is in town. Ava and Squishy supposed to be helping Mum clear out the garden shed, and if they do a good job, Mum and Dad will take them to the circus in the evening.

But when celebrity clown Hank Honk doesn’t turn up, Ava and Squishy find themselves starring in the show rather than just watching it!

Ava and Squishy’s adventures are fun, engaging and a great way to enjoy a shared story and to encourage the first steps towards independent reading.
Chirton Krauss is such a well-behaved child that he eats broccoli, even though he doesn't like it.

Myrtle, by contrast, is never good. She's not expected to eat broccoli, do any chores or be polite and nice, because her parents have decided that Chirton is the Goody, and Myrtle is not.

So what happens when Chirton decides not to be the Goody anymore?

In an entertaining and relatable way and with beautiful colour and style, Child explores the impact of family dynamics that can often label children as ‘the good one’ or ‘the naughty one’ – and who we all are under those labels.

When the Don’t Panic Gang receive an urgent call for help, three friends immediately leap into action and, donning their superhero costumes, they transform into Sumo Cat, Ninja Bird and Kung-Fu Worm. Clambering over rooftops, leaping off buildings and scaling walls – albeit, not always successfully – the invincible trio eventually reach the distressed caller, who is at the mercy of something huge and terrifying in the bathroom.

Bright, sketchy illustrations contain a wealth of amusing detail which will captivate and delight young children. With witty text, plenty of anticipation and opportunities to predict what will happen next, this is an exciting and funny adventure, perfect to read aloud.

Have you met Sleeping Brainy, whose ambition is to be Chancellor of the Exchequer? Or what about Robin Hoodlum, who collects taxes from the poor for his boss, the billionaire Baron Bottybum? Or Trumplestiltskin, an angry, orange man with ridiculous hair who is obsessed with getting richer and richer?

While traditional fairy tales undoubtedly have their place in children’s literature, this subversive and original collection tackles contemporary issues such as equal pay, knife crime, disability rights and fake news with great humour, intelligence and a fresh, exciting perspective.

These 17 stories and rhymes will be devoured enthusiastically by readers looking for fables that are relevant to the 21st century.
Two Terrible Vikings
Francesca Simon, illustrated by Steve May
Faber & Faber

Hack and Whack are naughty twins living in the snowy fjords of a Viking kingdom. Their parents are very proud of their wicked antics but are worried that Elsa Gold-Hair – who is sweet, kind and into sharing – might be a bad influence on them.

This is a very funny and exciting book from the creator of Horrid Henry, told in three interlinked short stories which make it more manageable for a child who is just beginning to read independently. The wild, laugh-out-loud humour level is well pitched for five to eight-year-olds, with amusing drawings by Steve May.

How to Change the World
Rashmi Sirdeshpande, illustrated by Annabel Tempest
Puffin

This fascinating picture book presents a selection of true stories about incredible people who have challenged injustice and worked together to make the world a better place. Readers will learn about the birth of democracy in Ancient Greece, the creation of the International Space Station and environmental campaigns like saving the whales and repairing the ozone layer. These remarkable achievements are sure to inspire young people to stand up for what is right and unite to evoke positive change.

Cat Kid Comic Club
Dav Pilkey
Scholastic

Li’l Petey the cat and his friend Molly have begun the Cat Kid Comic Club, a club for kids that like to draw comics. Li’l Petey and Molly start inspiring their fellow comic makers with ideas, from how to come up with an initial concept to giving awards for the weirdest comic.

Alongside a useful how-to element, there’s also a nice story about having faith in your abilities and the importance of persevering to improve your skills.

Perfect for existing fans of Dog Man and Captain Underpants as well as those new to Dav Pilkey’s accessible and zany stories.
The Ladybird Big Book of Slimy Things
Imogen Russell Williams, illustrated by Binny Talib
Ladybird

Get ready for a tour of all things slime – slimy creatures, slimy things, living slime and slime made by plants or animals – with a host of amusing experts including Doctor Hal O’Vera and Doctor Isaac Newt.

From hippos making their own slime sun-cream to the sleeping bags of slime used by parrotfish to snooze in every night, there’s a huge amount to learn about this oozy, icky substance in all its forms.

This is a fascinating book for young readers, written in an engaging and easy-to-read comic-strip style, jammed full of weird and unusual facts and complemented by hilarious illustrations.

The Tindims of Rubbish Island
Sally Gardner, illustrated by Lydia Corry
Zephyr

The Tindims are tiny people who live on a floating island in the middle of the ocean. They collect litter from the sea, which they transform into useful items.

Unfortunately, Bottle Mountain, which is constructed entirely from plastic bottles, is now so enormous that Captain Spoons cannot see beyond it to steer the island. The Tindims must work together to find a solution before it’s too late.

Combining eccentric characters, short chapters and lively illustrations, this delightful new series is ideal for confident, independent readers. Full of joy and laughter, this quirky adventure also carries an important environmental message about waste, pollution and recycling.

The Little War Cat
Hiba Noor Khan, illustrated by Laura Chamberlain
Macmillan

In the sunny, thriving city of Aleppo in Syria, a little grey cat enjoys a wonderful life. But on the day the humans with boots arrive, everything changes.

The little cat is scared and hungry until a caring human finds her. He is kind and patient and shows her a safer place where she finds friends, food and peace.

Inspired by the indomitable spirit of Mohammad Alaa Aljaleel, the ‘Cat Man of Aleppo’, this is the story of how hope can still thrive during times of extreme adversity and of the ripple effect that spreads from small acts of kindness.

Sona Sharma, Very Best Big Sister
Chitra Soundar, illustrated by Jen Khatun
Walker Books

Sona is not at all sure about being a big sister. But when the baby is born, she really wants to be the best big sister ever.

Set in a modern family in India, this book is rich in detail about Hindu beliefs, customs and ceremonies around welcoming a new child into the world. It is extensively illustrated with black-and-white drawings, which are packed full of charm and character.

The illustrations ensure that a reader will fall in love not only with the richness and beauty of Indian culture but also with Sona’s kind, warm family.
Interview with a Tiger
Andy Seed, illustrated by Nick East
Welbeck

Did you know that the sweet-looking honey badger is actually a ferocious killer? The giant anteater, on the other hand, is harmless to humans, although it has 100 teeth.

In an exclusive set of ‘interviews’ Andy Seed reveals the thoughts, fears and dreams of his animal guests – often with very amusing results.

Packed with quirky and surprising facts, and presented in an accessible and entertaining question-and-answer format, this book is a must for any animal lover or budding conservationist. Each interview covers a double-page spread and is illustrated in full colour.

Stars with Flaming Tails
Valerie Bloom, illustrated by Ken Wilson-Max
Otter-Barry Books

From alphabet poems to limericks, riddles, and lesser-known forms such as elfke (a Dutch poem for children featuring only 11 words), Valerie Bloom has managed to put into words how we all feel in this poetry collection for all moods.

Some poems are amusing, some are sad. One poem featuring an ‘Isle of Negatyves’, where dangerous ‘Kantdos’ can be targeted with an ointment of ‘Willdos’, speaks to children who have experienced anxiety and self-doubt.

Bold and seriously stylish illustrations perfectly complement each poem in this powerful and memorable collection.

Lizzie and Lucky: The Mystery of the Missing Puppies
Megan Rix, illustrated by Tim Budgen
Puffin

Eight-year-old Lizzie cannot wait to get a dog. One day, she spots a suspicious person snatching a puppy from a local garden. Outraged, Lizzie is determined to investigate. This could definitely be the start of a beautiful new friendship – and perhaps even a detective career for Lizzie.

Lizzie and her parents are deaf, and the family use sign language and sport colourful hearing aids. The author’s experience of partial deafness shines through, with helpful but gentle hints about the importance of accessibility and equality.

Above all, this is a joyous tale celebrating animals, mysteries, family and friendship.

The Puffin Keeper
Michael Morpurgo, illustrated by Benji Davies
Puffin

Five-year-old Allen Williams is on a ship bound for Liverpool when it’s shipwrecked near a lighthouse on the Isles of Scilly. Benjamin Postlethwaite, the lighthouse keeper, rescues the passengers in his small boat, saving them from the icy sea.

As he grows up, Allen writes letters to Benjamin but never receives a reply. Finally, Allen decides to return to Scilly. Yet, when his call-up papers come for the war, he must brave the sea again and face more adventures.

This heart-warming story is a short read, perfect for younger and older readers, with the feel of a classic tale.
Johnny Ball: Undercover Football Genius
Matt Oldfield, illustrated by Tim Wesson
Walker Books
Johnny Ball loves football. He loves it so much that he’s become assistant manager for the Tissbury Tigers Under 15s which, at the age of nine and three-quarters, makes him the youngest coach ever.

Unfortunately, Johnny’s older brother Daniel is the Tigers’ star player and doesn’t want anyone to know they’re related. This means that Johnny starts his coaching career in disguise as he embarks on a tumultuous race to finish at the top of the league.

With plenty of helpful advice that works for life in general as well as for football, this is a wise but very funny book with an inclusive message and lots of witty black-and-white illustrations.

Pizazz
Sophy Henn
Simon & Schuster
Pizazz is a superhero, but she hates her superpower. In fact, she hates it so much that sometimes she’d rather let the baddies win than to use it because it’s so embarrassing.

Yet when Pizazz becomes an eco-monitor at school, she finds out that a local business is planning to steamroller the local park and build a car park on it instead. Can she stop them? And will she have to use her (actually quite fabulous) superpower?

Sophy Henn’s zany illustrated adventure is full of friendship, family and positive activism – and completely relatable for anyone who has ever felt that other people’s talents are better than their own.

Too Small Tola and the Three Fine Girls
Atinuke, illustrated by Onyinye Iwu
Walker Books
Tola is the youngest of three siblings who live in a tiny flat with their grandmother in the Nigerian city of Lagos. Three stories see the resourceful Tola tricking her elder siblings into helping her with the chores, helping make ends meet when Grandmummy falls ill and being admired by three posh girls at the masquerade party.

Tola is a fabulous and sweet heroine who proves that though she might be small, she really is mighty, making her a wonderful role model for children. The black-and-white illustrations by Onyinye Iwu are beautifully expressive, bringing Tola, her family and the city of Lagos to life in exquisite detail.
Bunny vs Monkey
Jamie Smart
David Fickling Books

Bunny’s tranquil life in the woods is shattered with the arrival of Monkey, a loud, rude and thoroughly annoying megalomaniac. Monkey intends to rule as Supreme Emperor with a little help from genius inventor Skunky, whose wacky gadgets include a formidable Doomsday Device, designed to destroy everything of beauty, annihilate all happiness and bring misery to the woods.

Packed full of hilarious short stories, this bumper collection of cartoons covers an entire year of adventures for Bunny and Monkey. Off-the-wall characters, wacky storylines and hilarious comic-strip illustrations ensure there are plenty of laughs on every page.

Ways to Make Sunshine
Renée Watson, illustrated by Mechal Roe
Bloomsbury

Everything is changing in Ryan Hart’s life. Her father has lost his job so they have to move house and sell the car. Despite the difficulties, Ryan manages to find ways of ‘making sunshine’, helped by friends who stick with her no matter what, and a caring family who laugh together and bond through their shared love of cooking.

Without ever shying away from difficult topics such as racism and financial hardship, this is a positive, optimistic story. For readers who are going through tough or troubling times, this book will be a welcome dose of happiness.

The Night Bus Hero
Onjali Q. Raúf
Orion

Hector is a bully. He particularly dislikes teacher’s pet Mei Lei, and hates a local homeless man, Thomas.

When a spate of London landmark sculptures are suddenly stolen, Hector reports Thomas to the police, but realises he’s got it horribly wrong. Accepting he needs Mei Lei’s help, Hector must race against time to make sure justice is done – and that’s not the only thing he needs to change.

An engrossing story that will help children understand and think deeply about those whose lives are impacted by homelessness – but with a wider message about the power of kindness, friendship, empathy and how everyone has the potential to change for the better.
A Day in the Life of a Poo, a Gnu and You
Mike Barfield, illustrated by Jess Bradley
Buster Books
The inside story of brains, eyes, teeth, pimples, farts, porcupines, Bactrian camels, komodo dragons, Japanese knotweed, lichen, clouds, clocks, Mars rovers, snowflakes and everything in between. Each topic gets its own page and is written in the form of first-person diaries, hilariously presented in strip cartoons. This book is fabulously informative and gives the reader the feeling of learning everything worth knowing.

The text and the illustrations are funny and reminiscent of Dav Pilkey's Captain Underpants. This book shouts out to be read, shared and read again. There won’t be many children who wouldn’t absolutely love this cracking read.

Vi Spy: Licence to Chill
Maz Evans
Chicken House
The day Vi's mum is going to marry Mr Sprout is the day Vi discovers something about her family. As she tries to come to terms with her new knowledge, an evil supervillain emerges from the shadows and threatens everything she values.

Can Vi foil the baddies in time to prevent Mum's brain exploding? Well, maybe, but she might need a little help from her friends – and the OAP branch of the Secret Service...

The first in a new series of adventures for Vi-the-wannabe-spy, this book is packed with jokes, thrills and important life lessons, and the many twists and turns will keep readers guessing.

Llama Out Loud
Annabelle Sami, illustrated by Allen Fatimaharan
Farshore
Yasmin Shah is a quiet girl in a REALLY loud family. It seems like no one's ever listening to her. So, one day, Yasmin decides to stop talking and plays checkers with the people at the elderly day care centre instead.

Then Levi, a talking, joking, laughing prankster of a toy llama, bursts into her life at full volume. It’s just a pity that all his pranks are blamed on Yasmin...

This fantastically funny book has a heroine who readers will love, even though she doesn’t speak for most of the book. It would suit readers who like a laugh-out-loud story with a big heart and a spark of magic.
Monster Max and the Bobble Hat of Forgetting
Robin Bennett, illustrated by Tom Tinn-Disbury

Firefly

Max has a unique gift: he can transform into a monster by burping and switch back by sneezing! But when his monster mischief makes the local paper, Max decides he wants to do good and fights off thieves stealing school charity funds.

Meanwhile, Peregrine suspects Max is hiding the monster and invents a machine to capture him. As the boys try to outwit each other, Max spots an odd creature lurking around... Could it be another monster?

Monster Max and the Bobble Hat of Forgetting has mystery, adventure, and is very, very funny. Beautiful illustrations capture the warmth of a story that many will curl up and devour in an afternoon.

A Mummy Ate My Homework
Thiago de Moraes

Scholastic

It's the first day of Year 6 and Henry can't wait to get back to school. Yet, in maths, Henry is pulled through a time portal and lands smack bang in the middle of Ancient Egypt!

Life is very different in 3100 BC, with pet crocodiles and hunting lessons, but Henry makes a great set of new friends and is pretty good at life in Ancient Egypt. But how can he get back?

Weaving historical fact and fiction together in this highly illustrated and hilarious book really works. Readers get to learn about ancient Egypt and solve hieroglyphic puzzles while reading a very funny story.

Planet Omar: Incredible Rescue Mission
Zanib Mian, illustrated by Nasaya Mafaridik

Hodder

Mrs Hutchinson is the best teacher in the universe. So when a fierce, crinkly-faced supply teacher replaces Mrs H, Omar is not pleased. Could Mrs H possibly have been abducted by aliens?

Be ready for an alien cat with a malfunctioning fur disguise, irrefutable signs of an alien landing and a spectacular Pakistani wedding that shows no evidence of alien involvement but is great fun all the same.

Omar and his friends bring their own opinions and cultural influences to the story, which gives the friendship real depth and makes them a great team.

My Life as a Cat
Carlie Sorosiak

Nosy Crow

Olive rescues a cat stuck in a tree during a storm and calls him Leonard. But Leonard isn't a cat – he's an alien who plummeted to earth and ended up in the wrong body. And Leonard needs to make it to Yellowstone National Park for his alien family to collect him. How is he going to get there, and will Olive be able to help?

Whilst neither Olive nor Leonard feel like they fit in to the world very well, their bond as outsiders strengthens their friendship. This is a heart-warming story about making your own family, the wonder of being ‘weird’ and the importance of friends.
InvestiGators
John Patrick Green
Macmillan
Mango and Brash, two alligator detectives, are investigating the disappearance of the world-famous cupcake chef Gustavo Mustachio.

What is Gustavo Mustachio’s big oven doing at the Science Factory, and what caused the massive explosion? And who might be keeping the famous chef prisoner, making him bake dough after dough, searching for the perfect sewer-resistant recipe...?

Fans of Dog Man will adore this pun-heavy whodunnit graphic novel, which is just as clearly laid out, colourful and silly as Dav Pilkey’s phenomenally successful series. Mango and Brash are an excellent duo that readers will want to see more from after this first in the series.

The Day the Screens Went Blank
Danny Wallace, illustrated by Gemma Correll
Simon & Schuster
One terrible evening, every screen in the whole world becomes completely unusable. No computers, no cash machines, no CCTV, no sat nav. And that’s not all – no screens also means no post, no email and no shopping. In fact, anything that relies on the internet or other wireless technology just stops working.

Stella and Teddy know they need to check on Grandma to make sure she’s OK. It’s time for a rescue mission, but without the right technology, that could make for rather a challenging journey...

Featuring fun black-and-white illustrations throughout, The Day The Screens Went Blank is interesting, thought-provoking and very, very funny.

The Dragon Ark
Curatoria Draconis, illustrated by Tomislav Tomic
Magic Cat Publishing
The Dragon Ark offers refuge and help for all dragons while also studying dragonkind – from the sea serpents in the Mariana Trench to the Antarctic Ice Dragon and the seven-headed hydra of the Llullaillaco volcano on the Argentina-Chile border.

However, there is one dragon that the Dragon Protector has never seen with her own eyes: the Celestial Dragon in China. Will readers be able to find it?

Queen of Freedom
Catherine Johnson
Pushkin Press
Set in Jamaica in the 1720s, this is the incredible true story of Queen Nanny, leader of the Maroons, a community of people who escaped slavery and settled high up in the Blue Mountains. The Maroons are hunted by British soldiers, known as redcoats, and are either killed or returned to a brutal life of slavery. With a skill for strategic thinking and tactical fighting, Nanny does everything she can to protect her people.

Part of the True Adventures series, this powerful tale raises awareness of a rarely discussed episode in British history.
Shoe Wars
Liz Pichon
Scholastic

Wicked Wendy Wedge’s ambition is to take over the whole of Shoe Town (and then the world!) and she’ll do absolutely anything to achieve it. That includes forcing almost everyone to wear her clumpy, uncomfortable wedges. Oh, and she has made slippers illegal.

All Wendy needs now is the design for the world’s first flying shoes. Can Ruby and Bear Foot, and their inventor dad, keep their design safe? Or will Wendy triumph and take her next step towards world domination?

This is a tale oozing with creativity and packed with black-and-white illustrations, exciting typography and visual jokes.

Dragon Mountain
Katie & Kevin Tsang
Simon & Schuster

Billy Chan would rather spend his summer surfing than travelling to China for summer camp. But when he makes a new group of friends – nervous Dylan, kind-hearted Ling-Fei and confident Charlotte – they discover that nothing is as it seems on this particular trip.

The gang soon become embroiled in a world of magic and adventure as they discover four warrior dragons hidden in a nearby mountain. Teaming up with the incredible beasts, they enter a huge battle to stop powerful dark forces from destroying the world.

With jaw-dropping twists, astonishing creatures and a beautifully realised world, there’s great fun to be had in the Dragon Realm.

It’s Her Story: Rosa Parks
Lauren Burke, illustrated by Shane Clester
Sunbird Books

This book explores the life and legacy of celebrated civil rights activist Rosa Parks, whose infamous refusal to give up her bus seat for a white person brought her to public attention. This single, seemingly small, act, which broke the laws of segregation at the time, resulted in her arrest, a 13-month bus boycott by black passengers and an eventual change in the law.

Rosa’s story is brought to life for a young audience in this wonderfully accessible graphic novel. As well as learning about a key figure in American history, children will also understand the importance of being fair and always standing up to injustice.
Anisha, Accidental Detective: School’s Cancelled!
Serena Patel, illustrated by Emma McCann
Usborne
Anisha likes nothing better than a good mystery to solve, so when someone sabotages her erupting volcano experiment, she expects to find the culprit easily. Yet with Aunty Bindi stressing over Granny Jas’s birthday party, Anisha is finding it hard to focus. Luckily Granny Jas has absolute faith in her and, surprisingly, it is the party preparations that give Anisha the tools she needs to unmask the saboteur.

Anisha’s experiences shine a light on the difficulties children can experience when facing life changes, but her story is also brilliantly funny and relatable. A super fun read with lots of heart.

Britannica All New Children’s Encyclopedia: What We Know & What We Don’t Christopher Lloyd
Britannica Books
Exploring a wide range of topics with stunning illustration and real-life photography, this brilliant encylopedia is divided into eight chapters: Universe, Earth, Matter, Life, Humans, Ancient & Medieval Times, Modern Times, and Today & Tomorrow. Its aim is to take children through time from the creation of the universe to the developments we might expect in the future. It will provide the answers to many a question, from facts about space probes to the coral reef crisis and where on the planet you can find volcanoes. It’s also perfect for kids who don’t love sitting down with a novel but are curious about the world around them.

The Good Germ Hotel
Kim Sung-hwa & Kwon Su-jin, illustrated by Kim Ryung-eon
What on Earth Books
There are trillions of good microbes living in, and on, your body and you’ve probably never noticed them. But if you’d like to know more, one of the good bacteria that live in your gut is offering a guided tour of the human body and its tiny inhabitants.

Presented as a conversation between a human host and a colonic bacterium, and illustrated in a detailed, comic book style, this book examines digestion, gut health, immunity and antibiotics, and provides context for infections such as Covid-19. Sure to be read again and again, this is complex science made accessible and exciting.
Voyage of the Sparrowhawk
Natasha Farrant
Faber & Faber

It’s 1919, just after the end of the Great War. Ben and Lotti, two very different children whose lives have been changed forever by the war, set off for France aboard the barge Sparrowhawk. Ben’s father has died and his brother is missing somewhere in France, while Lotti is on the run.

Even readers who wouldn’t usually choose a historic adventure story will be hooked from the first page and gripped until the last. The action is fast-paced and fascinating, but it’s the characters that really bring this epic tale to life. There is no glossing over the devastation caused by war but it never overshadows the consequences experienced on a personal level by every one of the characters.

Amari and the Night Brothers
B. B. Alston
Farshore

Amari is a brave black heroine from the projects who struggles to feel like she belongs as a scholarship student at a prestigious private school. When her older brother vanishes, Amari’s desperate search leads her to the incredible discovery that her brother was working for a supernatural organisation. And now she’s pitted against the most frightening of villains – the dreaded Night Brothers.

This is a funny, gripping fantasy adventure with distinct contemporary influences. With the comforting appeal of an updated, girl-centred Percy Jackson, the roots of Amari’s story are planted firmly in Men in Black and Into the Spiderverse.

When the Sky Falls
Phil Earle
Andersen Press

It’s 1941, and 12-year-old Joseph is sent from Yorkshire to stay with his gran’s friend, Mrs F, in the city. She’s a gruff, unfriendly woman and he’s an angry boy who feels totally abandoned.

In the centre of the Blitz, the only thing Mrs F cares about is the rundown zoo that she owns, particularly a huge silverback gorilla called Adonis. Adonis and Joseph take an immediate dislike to each other but over the course of the story, their bonds deepen to a remarkable relationship.

This is a beautifully written historical adventure that will take readers on an emotional and exciting journey.

October, October
Katya Balen
Bloomsbury

Eleven-year-old October lives in the forest with her dad. Yet, when he’s injured in an accident, October is forced to stay in London with her mum. Everything in the city is wrong, from the cars and underground trains that make her sick, to school, where the other kids tease her.

Gradually, October makes friends with a boy in her class and discovers mudlarking on the Thames. As she lets her mum into her heart, life starts to change for the better.

Balen’s touching, perceptive story about a transitional phase in a young girl’s life is full of heart, lush description and the love of wild nature.
The Lightning Catcher
Clare Weze
Bloomsbury

When Alfie moves to the village of Folding Ford, he is baffled by a series of strange occurrences: a frozen puddle on a hot sunny day, a whirlwind in a bucket and a man with moths attached to his wrists by tiny threads.

Determined to get to the bottom of these mysteries, Alfie enlists the help of his new best friend Sam. Equipped with a notebook and an abundance of curiosity, their investigations lead them to creepy Ash House, home of ‘Moth-Man’ Nathaniel Clemm.

This exciting, science-packed novel is a cracking read and bursts with action, warmth and humour.

A Street Dog Named Pup
Gill Lewis
David Fickling Books

When Pup is abandoned in a strange, gloomy alley, all Pup wants to do is find his way home to the boy who loves him. But how can he do that when he doesn't even know where he is?

Luckily, there are streetwise dogs around who take him to a place of safety. But safety is always relative and life on the streets is hard, unpredictable and dangerous. Yet Pup never gives up on his dream of finding his boy again.

This epic tale of abandonment, friendship, cruelty and redemption is compelling and hard to put down.

Me, My Dad and the End of the Rainbow
Benjamin Dean, illustrated by Sandhya Prabhat
Simon & Schuster

Archie Albright’s parents are splitting up. It’s only when he overhears them arguing that he learns why – his dad is gay.

Benjamin Dean crafts some brilliant comedy scenes in this sweet, heart-warming story about Archie’s determination to go to Pride in London to support his dad. He is also great at conveying the rabbit-in-the-headlights psychological response of a pre-teen boy who cares about his family but doesn’t know how to express his emotions.

A kind book which gently frames the topic of a parent coming out and acknowledges that families come in all shapes and sizes.
Happy Here: 10 Stories from Black British Authors and Illustrators
Various authors, with an introduction by Sharna Jackson
Knights Of
In Alexandra Sheppard’s ‘A House Like No Other’, illustrated by Dorcas Magbadelo, Izzy goes to stay with her Aunty V in Brixton and helps her aunt move on from the past as well as find confidence in her skills as a dancer. In ‘You’re The Boss’ by E.L. Norry and illustrated by Chanté Timothy, Ash joins a new school where gaming in lessons is the norm, and children are required to have strange inoculations that make their eyes glow green...

These ten illustrated short stories from some of today’s best black authors and illustrators will thrill readers with the stories they’ve been waiting for.

This book really has everything: a skilfully spun plot, humour and charm, as well as unforgettable characters and poetry in its language.

White Bird: A Graphic Novel
R. J. Palacio
Puffin
As a child, Grandmère lost her family when the Nazis rounded up innocent Jews for forced labour or extermination. Left alone, she only survived because of the compassion and bravery of a family of strangers who were prepared to risk their own lives to keep her hidden and safe.

Creative use of darkness and light enhances this beautifully illustrated graphic novel that sounds a warning for our times: evil will flourish unless good people stand up to it. But the abiding message is one of positivity: that humanity and courage are powerful weapons in the face of hatred and persecution.

Amber Undercover
Em Norry
Oxford University Press
When Amber is chosen to be a spy by the mysterious Agency, she’s sent to infiltrate an exclusive boarding school that the Agency suspects harbours members of a cybercrime unit.

Yet, after a while, Amber realises that she’s more than capable of playing the others at their own game – and perfecting her spy skills at the same time.

A fast-paced, thriller-style story with tech detail that doesn’t overwhelm the plot and a humorous, likeable main character, Amber Undercover is a truly great read. As well as a cool saving-the-world plot, this is about growing up, finding your niche and learning to value what makes you unique.
Noah’s Gold
Frank Cottrell-Boyce, illustrated by Steven Lenton
Macmillan

Eleven-year-old Noah is seemingly allergic to any form of electronic technology. So accidentally breaking the internet was always going to happen. Unfortunately, he’s currently marooned on a deserted island with five other children.

When Noah finds a treasure map, going on a hunt for gold seems like a good place to start. But the mysterious island holds all kind of treasure – some of it found in very unexpected places.

Frank Cottrell-Boyce has created a brilliantly sympathetic and funny character in Noah, and his insecurity about being the person seemingly responsible for everything going wrong makes him a wonderfully relatable hero.

The Boy Who Met a Whale
Nizrana Farook
Nosy Crow

Razi can’t resist an early morning trip to the beach to watch the newly hatched turtles battling their way towards the sea. But the calm of the day is disturbed when he spots a tiny boat bobbing towards the shore. And hanging over the side is a small, still hand.

The boy in the boat is clearly in a bad way so when he starts telling tales of murdered sailors, missing treasure and giant sea monsters, Razi and his sister can’t tell if he’s telling the truth or just delirious. But excitement turns to jeopardy as they find themselves pursued by dangerous, ruthless criminals.

A great story with wide appeal for middle grade readers.

Boy, Everywhere
A. M. Dassu
Old Barn Books

Thirteen-year-old Sami has a good life in Damascus. Although he knows there is war in the rest of the country, he never seriously imagines it will reach him.

Yet when a bomb goes off at a shopping mall, shattering his little sister’s childhood, his family decide to sell everything and flee Syria. So begins Sami’s journey across Europe, and into danger, poverty and fear.

Despite all the trauma, this is an uplifting tale and a realistic representation of the experience of a refugee, though many are not as lucky as Sami. Timely and honest, this is a story that every school should have in its library.
Windrush Child
Benjamin Zephaniah
Scholastic

Leonard is part of the Windrush generation, one of thousands of people who were persuaded by the British government to help rebuild England after the Second World War and make a better life for themselves. The story begins with Leonard’s childhood, but follows him all the way to 2018 when he is denied citizenship in the country where he has lived his whole life.

In addition to his meticulous research of the period, Zephaniah draws on his own experience of growing up in Britain in the 1960s to describe the difficulties Leonard and his family face.

A brilliant and important book from one of the UK’s greatest poets and writers.

When Life Gives You Mangoes
Kereen Getten
Pushkin Press

Something happened last summer – something big – but Clara cannot remember what.

As a new summer stretches out before her, Clara can’t help questioning the things she thought she knew about the adults and the world around her. And when magnetic, outgoing Rudy arrives and shakes things up, Clara begins to unlock her buried memories. Will she work out what happened last summer?

This is a beautifully written story of small towns and the eternally shifting sands of friendship and family. It’s impossible not to feel everything Clara feels, while the storytelling is as mysterious as it is poetic – with a dramatic twist, too.

Life of Riley: Beginner’s Luck
Simon James Green, illustrated by Aleksei Bitskoff
Scholastic

Following a very badly timed sneeze, Riley finds himself cursed by a fortune teller at a funfair and quickly becomes the unluckiest boy alive.

All this changes when Brad Chicago appears. Impeccably stylish and with a stationery collection to die for, he actually wants to be Riley’s friend. Riley’s luck seems to be turning around at last, but if he wants to keep Brad as his bestie, he needs to get rid of the curse...

This funny, gentle story is packed with snappy humour and hilarious characters. You can’t help but love Riley, a brilliant, witty, world-weary kid and long-suffering underdog.
Twitch
M. G. Leonard
Walker Books

Twitch is a kind, sensitive 12-year-old boy who adores birds. He plans to spend the summer at his secret birdwatching hide in Aves Wood Nature Reserve, so is frustrated when his peaceful retreat is overrun with police officers on the hunt for an escaped prisoner. However, Twitch’s birdwatching skills of patience and careful observation make him the perfect detective and he is soon drawn into the search for Robber Ryan. This engaging and uplifting tale about friendship, trust and the wonder of nature is seamlessly interwoven with an intriguing detective story. Beautifully written, it is an absolute joy to read.

The Haunting of Aveline Jones
Phil Hickes, illustrated by Keith Robinson
Usborne

Aveline spends her half-term with her austere Aunt Lilian in Malmouth, a windswept village on the Cornish coast. Upon finding a book about local ghosts and phantoms in a dusty, second-hand bookshop, she is intrigued to learn that it once belonged to 11-year-old Primrose Penberthy, who mysteriously disappeared from Malmouth 30 years earlier. As Aveline is drawn deeper into the tales, events take an unsettling turn...

With appealing characters, a spine-tingling plot and a fittingly bleak, stormy setting, this chilling book is the first in a compelling series of ghostly mysteries.

Skywake: Invasion
Jamie Russell
Walker Books

SkyWake is the gaming phenomenon of the year and centres around an intergalactic war between two alien forces, the Red Eyes and the Squids. The best players from around the world are invited to compete in live tournaments, which are held simultaneously in six international cities. As the London tournament draws to a close, Casey and her team, the Ghost Reapers, realise the game has become all too real, and they find themselves literally battling for their lives.

This exhilarating futuristic adventure, the first in a trilogy, is a fast-paced, thrilling read, perfect for gamers and sci-fi fans.

Emmy Levels Up
Helen Harvey
Oxford University Press

Emmy lives some of the best bits of her life online. Yet, in real life, Emmy feels inadequate and uncoordinated, and the cool new girl Vanessa has also got Emmy’s oldest friend to turn against her.

Fortunately, a lunchtime computer club helps Emmy and the other ‘geeks’ come to realise that what makes them different also gives them strength.

This is a hard-hitting yet empowering exploration of the toxic effects of bullying, not just on those who are targeted but also on those who are too afraid to challenge cruel behaviour for fear of becoming victims too. Ultimately uplifting, Emmy’s story is funny, touching and a captivating read.

The insights you need to ensure no child is left behind

Literacy 360 is an innovative whole-school tool that enables you to understand and monitor each child’s individual attitude to reading and how they feel about themself as a reader. It gives you valuable insights to help inform early evidence-based interventions in key stages 2 and 3 to ensure all students develop positive attitudes to reading and read for pleasure.

Created in collaboration with Adam Lancaster, experienced Senior Librarian and Head of Literacy, Literacy 360 incorporates the tried and tested Impact Through Reading methodology and the Attitude to Reading survey providing you with everything you need.

If we don’t know our students, then how can we help them to improve and how do we know when they have improved? We need to understand where their weaknesses lie and what barriers they have stopping them from being able to progress in terms of literacy and therefore learning. Once we have discovered this we can then go about putting the right support in place.

Readingmate is the only free app that builds positive, lifelong reading habits and makes your child a keen reader.

Join thousands of parents already using and enjoying the app, and access amazing features to support your child’s reading:

- Reward, track and record
  With every step your child makes they will receive badges and milestones as a reward. We want to encourage and inspire them to keep going!

- Research-based resources for parents
  Free educational articles that focus on reading and literacy to help you learn how best to support your child’s reading.

- The Bookshop that gives back
  Access to thousands of the latest, popular children’s books. For every book you buy, we donate 20p directly to charities and schools.

Start your child’s reading journey today and create the habit of a lifetime.
“We absolutely would recommend the Complete Literacy Solution from Renaissance.”

Boothferry Primary School in the East Riding of Yorkshire is a multi-cultural community school that places family at its core. In 2017, Accelerated Reader and Star Reading was brought in to support the school’s literacy strategy and promote more positive attitudes towards reading. They were subsequently praised by Ofsted in a February 2019 inspection for their teaching of reading. Last year the school upgraded to Renaissance’s Complete Literacy Solution by adding myON to support reading development in a blended learning environment.
